Organiser's comments - Jill Gorvett

It was good to see you all enjoy yourselves in the sunshine today. Some of you even managed two courses and obviously enjoyed the challenges Chris had planned for you. Hope to see you all at future events. My sincere thanks to all the helpers who gave so generously of their time and made my job easy.

Controller's comments - Peter Gorvett

Chris did a great job in maximising the potential of this area that it's hard to remember he is a first-time planner. For the experienced orienteers, the technical and physical challenges made it a long green course. As a child Jill (now W60) remembers playing in the abandoned allotments that are now established woodland.

Planner's comments - Chris and Cari Littler

We had a steep learning curve for this event, involving learning new software, re-learning the requirements for yellow and orange courses, and fitting the courses into quite a restrictive area. Planning began when Bingham was covered in thick snow and the new (mostly temporary) paths created by the sledgers were more distinctive than the paths on the map. After a too-close encounter with a dog, and some last minute changes to the map, we finally got there. The green course was easier to plan and I was pleased it seemed to have created some challenges for the runners. Control 9 on green caused as much interest for planner and controller in locating it and making the map correct around it, as it did for some of the runners in navigating to it. Thanks to Peter for his patience in teaching us the long list of things to remember that must seem obvious to anyone who has planned more than once.
